

VOGUE

The Best Drugstore Beauty Products, According to Vogue Editors

But drugstore poetics aside, the stuff we buy here often falls into the category of “products we can’t live without.” And though it’s hard to break your routine and try something new from the packed shelves, one could argue that a tip on what’s great (and affordable!) is the best kind of beauty advice there is. So, we asked 14 Vogue editors to reveal their go-to products—here are their picks.

Arden Fanning, Contributor

I’ve been on a French pharmacy tour all summer collecting travel jewels. Payot’s mini hand lotion is such a cute shape and leaves zero greasy finish. If you can find it, the 1oz tube of Embryolisse Lait-Crème Concentré (a regular backstage during fashion week) is the perfect slim size to carry around and use for everything. And Yves Rocher’s organic marigold Shine Shampoo Bar smells so good, like a waterless version of the little bath kit that I always save from my favorite hotel in Paris.

Yves Rocher Shine
Shampoo Bar

YVES ROCHER $10